PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

2017 ended on a high note with the St. Andrew's Ball once again selling out—three weeks in advance no less—and with our Children's Christmas Party at the Black Watch Officers' Mess, organized by our Youth Committee, also proving to be popular with kids and adults alike. We are especially thankful for an appearance by Santa Claus who delighted each of the children with a present.

In January, while most people are still recovering from the holiday period and hunkering down indoors wishing they were somewhere else, the SAS hosted two tremendously successful events. Our Kilt

Skate, postponed by a week due to a snowstorm, took place on January 20 at the Old Port, and saw a wide variety of participants skating in tartan accompanied by piping and a dance display. This year we received a financial contribution from the Government of Scotland which is gratefully acknowledged as being of material support for this event. Secondly, our Robbie Burns Supper occurred on the Bard of Ayrshire's actual birthday, January 25: it also was a sell-out, and was held for the first time at the Mount Royal Club in superb surroundings. Our main sponsor for the supper was Pembroke Management, celebrating their 50th year. Thank you, Ian Aitken!

We have had a great deal of positive feedback on our events, our websites, and in general the energy with which we are ensuring there is always something Scottish on the calendar here in Montreal. The transformation forward of the SAS should not be considered as happenstance—many, and indeed most, cultural societies are being challenged by demographics, financials, membership and, sadly, just a plain lack of interest in doing things reflecting the heritage of one's culture.

Not us, we are moving forward in three visible areas:

Branding: We are consistent in our graphic imaging throughout all of our communication platforms: our websites, emails and printed materials. We use social media as well as traditional media to get the word out on what we do.

Breadth: As referenced above, our calendar is full. We have all of our “traditional” events as well as ones where the SAS plays an adjunct/supportive role (the Montreal Highland Games for example). Our appeal is also broadened to ALL communities in Montreal by employing medical endeavours as the beneficiaries for funds raised. All Montrealers and Quebecers are able to enjoy Scottish-themed events while supporting something that is relevant to them. Currently we are supporting the Douglas Mental Health University and the Montreal Neurological Institute.

Membership and Youth: I am happy to report that with all of these successful events, we have had a flurry of new membership applications—and of course this is what-it-is-all-about. As a volunteer-centered organization we require new members. Additionally, I am particularly pleased to see younger people involved at various levels. Improving demographic breadth is a key measure of the health of your Society.

In closing, we are well positioned for 2018 as we embrace the larger mandate that is now the St. Andrew's Society of Montreal—the best cultural organization in town.

Yours aye,

Jason MacCallum

"Scottish Band with the Bagpipes"—a mural in the Mysuru Palace, Mysore, India

A SASSENACH ABROAD: SCOTLAND IN INDIA

By Sean Smith

This past summer, I had the opportunity of a lifetime to travel to India for three weeks. I was excited at the prospect to experience a culture and environment very different to what I have been exposed to before. I visited ancient Hindu temples built on top of hills that seemed to touch the sky, giving an unobstructed view for miles from the summit, and to my amazement inside the temple was a 10-meter-tall solid granite statue of a god. I drove through small towns where their only source of water is from cisterns on top of their homes, and where they need to let the water cool down when it comes from the tap to drink it. All this is to say, I was equally amazed to find out during my travels that bits of Scotland are in India, and no, I'm not talking about Scottish whisky. You see, in the past Scotland exported more than just whisky and soldiers to India: they also sent sculptures, churches and art.

When I visited the Mysuru Palace, the current residence of the Mysuru Maharaja, they were preparing for Mysuru Dasara, a great festival for the Maharaja to give thanks to the people and to the gods. As I walked towards the palace, I was welcomed by a familiar sound of bagpipes filling the air, at which I thought that the heat was finally getting to me. I was pleasantly surprised and equally relieved to find a pipe and drum band practicing for the festival. As I continued towards the palace, I met a very enthusiastic English-speaking tour guide who was excited to see a bearded Canadian. During our tour, he was showed me the art work, explaining to me the cultural significance of the architecture and symbols. We came to a grand hall that was lined with a mural depicting a Mysuru Dasara, and the first section of the mural was a pipe and drum band.

I asked my guide why the pipe band was shown in the grand hall. He explained that the pipe band in Mysuru plays an important role. They lead the men into battle and announce that the Maharaja is coming. They come before any other section of the parade and are revered due to the complexity of playing the instrument. But the Scottish influences didn't end with its musical gift to the world.

Inside the Kalyana Mantapa (which in English means "Marriage Hall"), there were more treasures from Scotland. Up high, the stained glass windows were crafted in Edinburgh. The floor and pillars, which span two floors, were brought from Glasgow. Even in front of the palace sat cast-iron lion statues that were produced in Scotland.

Following my trip to the Mysuru Palace, I started to notice more influences from Scotland. When I returned to Bangalore I came across St. Andrew's Church, a Presbyterian congregation mainly comprised of Indian nationals. As I entered the church, I was once again greeted with a familiar sound, a brogue that is more commonly associated with a glen or a whisky. It belonged to one of the ministers, a distinguished-looking red-headed man who was as surprised to find me as I was to encounter him.

The minister told me that construction of the church was started in 1864 by Lady Grant, wife of Lieutenant-General Sir Hope Grant who was the then-Quartermaster-General of her Majesty's Forces. The church opened two years later in 1866 and stands relatively unchanged in both appearance and in purpose since that day. As we carried on our conversation, in this surreal setting, he ended our conversation by telling me that Bangalore has a St. Andrew's Society. He had attended their Burn's Night Suppers and their St. Andrew's Ball, although this year would be his last as he was going back home then to Scotland. It was unfortunate that he was not able to introduce me to the Society before I had to return to Canada.

This was a humbling experience and one which I was fortunate to have. I was taken away by the spirit of the people, their sense of community and their ingenuity in the face of poverty. India is a place that is looking forward towards the future while preserving the past, and amongst it all are little pieces from Scotland hidden in plain sight.

RECENT HAPPENINGS

More than 120 participants and volunteers met in the Officer's Mess of the Black Watch Armoury to celebrate A Taste of Scotland on October 13. Some thirty distinct and distinguished scotches were up for tasting. Jean-François Pilon, a well-known scotch-tasting expert, was on hand to describe the malts and blends in all their subtleties. Long-time members of the Activities Committee could be seen serving haggis, neeps and chappit tatties after the Address to the Haggis, given spiritedly by Jeff McCarthy. The now annual auction of the bottle leftovers, and a raffle generously furnished with many Scottish goods, provided funds for the Children's Christmas party, a much-appreciated tradition.

Hard at work at the Taste of Scotland

The Youth Committee organized the Annual Children's Christmas Party at the Black Watch Armoury. Debutantes and escorts from the 2017 Ball led the Christmas-themed activities. The Black Watch Association Pipes and Drums and the Jennifer Stephenson School of Highland Dancing provided spectacular entertainment. Santa Claus made a special appearance and brought presents for all the children. Please join us next year at this event—a wonderful way to maintain or start a family tradition.

Due to an amazing snowstorm the week before, the 4th Annual Great Canadian Kilt Skate was postponed to January 20. Despite the postponement, the turnout was impressive, with 34 people dressed in a kilt or tartan or plaid arriving to skate at the Natrel Skating Rink in the Old Port. Thanks to the generous support of the Scottish government, they were able to skate for free and enjoy delicious cake and hot chocolate. They joined about another 80 skaters who chose to go without tartan on the ice, on a beautiful, sunny minus-2°C day. Thanks to all who attended the event, our piper Sacha Matthew, our Highland dancers, the Activities Committee, Marilyn Meikle, and the Old Port Skating rink who made it all so special. See you next year with the 5th annual event!

This year we held our annual Burns Supper at the Mount Royal Club, our first time at this venue. It was a lovely setting for this traditional celebration. Over a hundred people sat down to dine on haggis, roast beef, Yorkshire pudding and trifle. We were entertained by Pete Limeburner's stirring Address to the Haggis, Cameron Stevens' wonderful piping, the Toast to the Immortal Memory by Marilyn Meikle, the Toast to the Lassies by Jason MacCallum, the Reply to the Toast by his wife Antoinette von Hahn, and a recitation of Burns poetry by Gillian Leitch. Special thanks go to Ian Aitken, Pembroke Private Wealth Management and MJ Squared for sponsoring the event. It was a congenial evening with great food, and a memorable way to celebrate the genius of Scotland's National Poet.

LIEUTENANT-COLONEL BRUCE BOLTON HONORED BY FRANCE

Recently, Honorary Lieutenant-Colonel Bruce Bolton of the Black Watch (RHR) of Canada was named a "Chevalier" in France's Legion d'Honneur. This high distinction is a recognition of the more than 40 years that the Macdonald Stewart Foundation has been involved in various projects in France where Bruce was a key player. These projects include Jacques Cartier's Manor in Saint-Malo; Samuel de Champlain's town church in Brouage; many exhibitions; and the Prix Samuel de Champlain which celebrates a Canadian with a public presence in France and a Frenchman with a public presence in Canada. Bruce also accepted, on behalf of the Macdonald Stewart Foundation, the "Médaille Grand Mécène de France" in 2009, presented in gratitude for the Foundation's philanthropic endeavours with France. It is still the only Canadian institution to be thus recognized.

We at the St Andrew's Society of Montreal extend our congratulations and wish both Roberta and Bruce the very best for the future.

REPORT FROM THE

2017 ST. ANDREW'S BALL

Ball week began with the Atwater Library lecture by Don Nerbas, McGill University's first Chair in Canadian-Scottish Studies. "The Scots in Canadian History: A Reconnaissance" was well attended and thought provoking.

Held on the Patron Saint's holiday, the Cantlie Hotel was the site of the sold-out St. Andrew's Luncheon. Guest of Honour Lorne Elliot regaled attendees with stories woven one into another like a giant icovellavna. A toast was raised to Scots celebrating across the pond who, unlike us, did have the day off!

It was an honour to chair the Charity Ball Committee and work with such a committed group of volunteers. Guests of Honour Sir Malcolm MacGregor of MacGregor, 24th chief of Clan Gregor, and Lady MacGregor of MacGregor thoroughly enjoyed their stay in Montreal and expressed their gratitude for the warm welcome they received from all they met.

Guests dined on a delicious meal that was blessed by the Reverend Graham Andrew Singh and Chief Kahsennenhawe Sky-Deer, and danced until the wee hours of the morning in the ballroom and the Scottish Arms Pub. The dance presentation, "A Tribute to Montreal's Founding Cultures," was spectacular. The debutantes and their escorts danced with confidence. Thanks to all who bid generously on the items in the Silent Auction to raise over $17,000. These funds, combined with over $5,000 raised at the 2017 Montreal Highland Games via the Caledonian Run and the Tug-of-War, allowed the Society to present a cheque for $22,305 to the Douglas Hospital Foundation this past December.

The Ball's theme, the "Montreal 1642 Tartan" celebrating our diversity and unity, summed up Ball week. Scots, Montrealers and so many others came together to celebrate our cultures, share a meal, enjoy each other's company and recognize that we have so much more in common than we might have realized. And, of course, we all have more fun when we celebrate together!

How can one sum up "Ball Week" in approximately 300 words? Easy! Let the pictures do the talking.
